Hurricane Moves Inland, Damage Slight Launch Attack Along Entire Eastern Front

MISSILES MIAMI IN SWEEP ON FLORIDA COAST

Report No Lives Lost as Wind Slackens Force; Fires Start at Fort Lauderdale.

POWER SUPPLY HIT

Nassau Buildings Nailed Up; Storm Lashes Bahamas Capital Two Hours.

(By Associated Press) MIAMI, Fla.—A threatening tropical hurricane that beat at Nassau for two hours last night crossed the lower Florida east coast early today with greatly diminished force, apparently inflicting only minor property damage.

The weather bureau reported the storm, with a very small center, passed inland about 14 miles south of Miami and continued its course toward Fort Myers and other gulf coast points.

Nassau and Miami reported damage to power supplies in some sections, but no major destruction of property and no loss of life.

The center of the hurricane apparently passed between Miami and Homestead, but local sources said the chief damage there was to the rapidly-ripening citrus crops.

The weather bureau warned that high winds would continue in Miami and over central south Florida for several hours.

In Miami, the highest sustained wind reported was 63 miles an hour with occasional gusts of 75 miles an hour—far less than the 102 reported from Nassau where the hurricane passed eight hours earlier.

The most serious damage was at Fort Lauderdale, where power failures disrupted all but essential activities.

Small fires, caused by short circuits, were reported in Fort Lauderdale and in Miami.

Developing with unprecedented speed in the Atlantic almost 1,000 miles from Miami, the hurricane gathered force as it struck across the scattered Bahamas islands and aimed at Florida hardly 36 hours after it first was reported.

Yankees Gun For Fourth Game, Title

Dodgers Call On Wyatt to Keep Them In Series Battle.

(By International News Service) NEW YORK—Seeking his fifth world's championship in six years, Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees today called on right-hander Ernie Bonham to take the mound in an attempt to capture what can be the World Series "clincher" for the American League champs.

With three wins already under their belts, the Yankees only need today's game to clinch the championship. The Brooklyn Dodgers, seeking to stay in the running, assigned Whit Wyatt to take over the hurling. It was Wyatt, a 22-game winner, who won the Dodgers' only series contest.

Broadway bookies, convinced that yesterday's 7-to-1 loss, had just about sealed the fate of the National League champs, were quoting the Yankees at 8-to-5 to win today's game and as high as 10-to-1 to walk off with the series.

Although the day dawned cloudy, the weatherman predicted "fair" weather and continued warm temperatures for today. The forecast said "Monday, fair and continued warm in forenoon and early afternoon."

Yesterday's hectic game, witnessed by 33,813, saw the Yankees emerge victors after all but losing the game 4-to-3. The Dodgers were ahead by the score in the ninth with two out, none on, and the count two and three on Tommy Henrich. Relief hurler Hugh Casey then fanned the Yankee batsmen, but Catcher Mickey Owen muffed the ball, and Henrich safely reached first.

Then the Yankees turned on the heat. Joe DiMaggio singled and Charlie Keller followed with a double and the Yankees were on top 5-to-4. Bill Dickey then walked and Joe Gordon finished off the Brooks with a double that drove in two more runs. The badly shaken Dodgers went out one-two-three in their final turn.

PARALYZE PLANT

13 Crane Operators Tie Up Biggest Steel Mill.

GARY, Ind.—(UP)—A walkout of 13 crane operators today paralyzed the largest steel mill in the world—the sprawling Gary plant of the Carnegie-Illinois company—halting 68 furnaces and throwing 13,000 men out of work.

Company spokesmen said operations at the 14,000-acre plant were almost at a standstill. The day shift was turned away at 8 a. m. The company estimated that 85 per cent of orders in production before the walkout were for the armament program.

The crane operators, in a key position to block movement of ingots from open hearth furnaces to the soaking pits and thus create a bottleneck in the entire production process, were called out yesterday by the Steel Workers' Organizing committee (CIO).

Brandeis Eulogized At Death As One Of Greatest Judges

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Retired Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis, who died last night at the age of 84, was eulogized today by the bar and laymen as one of the greatest judges in history. Death came to the noted jurist—last of the great dissenters—at 7:15 p. m. yesterday after a brief illness. He suffered a heart attack last Wednesday and failed to recover. It was the only serious illness he had had since retiring from the bench in 1939.

The supreme court, on which he served as an associate justice for 23 years, convenes at noon for its first meeting of the 1941-42 term. It will hear a statement by Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone in Brandeis' memory and adjourn immediately.

President Roosevelt made no public statement, but sent from the White House a letter of condolence. (Continued on Page 12, Col. 8)

Barking Pup Credited With Saving Lives of Three In Mansfield Home

Dog Smells Escaping Gas, Rouses Husband, Wife, Relative.

Buster is just a three-month-old pup but he was a hero today, credited with saving the lives of three persons in a Franklin avenue residence.

Last night while his owners, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph O'Connor, 60½ North Franklin avenue, were seated in the kitchen of their home with Mrs. O'Connor's mother, Mrs. Eva Harbaugh, Buster suddenly roused himself from a comfortable spot under the kitchen stove and started barking.

He dashed around the room barking excitedly and then O'Connor decided to investigate.

He looked under the gas range near Buster's blanket and then made a discovery.

Gas was leaking from a broken pipe in the oven. He turned off a supply valve.

"We didn't notice the gas at all until the pup started barking, but afterward all of us noticed we had been feeling a little uncomfortable," O'Connor said.

"My mother-in-law, Mrs. Harbaugh, complained of feeling ill but she quickly recovered."

O'Connor said "it would have been very easy for us to have been overcome if the dog hadn't noticed the fumes first."

A second tragedy was narrowly averted immediately after discovery of the gas leak.

After he had closed the valve, O'Connor said the family opened windows and doors to clear the room of gas. He said that he then went to the oven to make sure that the valve was working.

He lighted a match. There was a loud puff and flames leaped out of the oven. Part of the hair on the left side of his head was singed by the flames as he jumped back.

Meanwhile, Buster, always the

PAY HIKE, METER PURCHASING UP

Council To Consider Requests of Mayor, Employees at Tuesday Session.

Purchase of 130 more parking meters and a request by unionized city employees for a pay increase will be considered by city council at its October meeting tomorrow night in Municipal building.

Mayor William J. Locke, in a letter to council's traffic committee early last month, suggested that the additional meters be purchased and installed on North Mulberry street from Temple court to West Second street and on Second street from Mulberry to Main.

The meters would allow two-hour parking.

City employees in the street and garbage department enrolled as members of Local 128 are petitioning council for wage increases to make up for increased living conditions which they claim have raised 12 per cent.

Other items to be considered include the suspension of parking meters after 6 p. m. on Saturdays, permission to both the state and county to build a bridge over Touby's run on North Main street, permission to the Lamp-lighters' Council for the Blind to establish a concession stand in the Municipal building.

Plan 'Face-Lifting' For Mansfield's Postoffice

Government Sidetracks New Building Proposal Due To Emergency; Repairs Planned.

Mansfield may not have a new postoffice, due to the "present emergency" but it will have a completely redecorated building within 60 days after contracts have been awarded for painting, plumbing, and other repair work. Postmaster Herman E. Homberger announced today.

A new 66-foot flagstaff, replacing one damaged by lightning a month ago, will also be included in the repair program.

Plans for a new postoffice, or even remodeling the present structure had to be laid aside due to the national emergency, permitting only repairs to be made on the building.

The postoffice roof, which was damaged during a storm over a month ago will be thoroughly repaired, and the entire interior of the building, including the lobby is to receive a new coat of paint.

The new flagstaff, to be built on the lawn to the east of the main approach to the building, will have an overall length of 66 feet, six of which are to be set in a concrete foundation with an ornamental base four and one-half feet high, made of cast iron.

A two and one-half foot walk will extend around this base with steps leading from the base to the sidewalk, Homberger said.

A 20-ounce copper ball, covered with 22-kara, golf leaf will surmount the new flagpole.

Bids for the repairs were mailed out today by Postmaster Homberger, and will be opened on Oct. 22, when the awards will be made from Washington. Work is expected to be completed within 60 days after start of the project.

SANDUSKY—(AP)—A laborer and a 15-year-old Toledo boy were held today in the death of John W. Shea, 48, of the Ohio Soldiers and Sailors' home, who was killed by a bullet fired from an automobile while occupants cruised about the city Friday night firing a revolver.

Shea was shot as he walked near the Soldiers' home with three companions.

24 MANSFIELD PLANTS TO JOIN IN OPM PARLEY

Labor Supply Committee to Be In City For 4 Meetings on Job Problem Tomorrow.

3 MORE CONTRACTS LET

Two Industries Here Receive Orders Totalling $43,537 From War Department.

Heads of 24 Mansfield industries today prepared to join the OPM regional labor committee and Mansfield labor organizations here Tuesday in an attempt to solve the unemployment problem facing the city.

The labor committee will be here for four meetings with the Mansfield groups during the day and evening.

Meanwhile, the war department today announced the award of three defense contracts totalling $43,537 to two Mansfield firms, helping to brighten the city's industrial outlook.

Means of obtaining and handling additional defense contracts to provide work during the period of domestic production curtailment will be discussed at the sessions here tomorrow.

Two of the contracts went to the Taylor Metal Products company and the other to the Hoff Manufacturing company. The Taylor Products company orders include one for $22,473 for approximately 650 carts for hauling dishes and the other for $10,114 for parts and water heaters for field ranges.

The Hoff Manufacturing company received a $10,950 order for carrying straps for knapsacks and other army equipment. Both Mansfield firms have been working on defense orders for several months.

Mansfield labor unions, representing both CIO and AFL members, are expected to propose a program at the meetings here Tuesday, calling for increased efforts to obtain defense contracts and the temporary release of labor to accept defense jobs.

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—(AP)—Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican, will have a conference with the president at the White House tomorrow to turn over the information of "utmost value" which he said he brought from his recent trip to Rome.

Rain, Snow Delay Rescue Of 'Chutist Atop Devil's Tower

DEVIL'S TOWER, Wyo.—(UP)—Rain and snow lashed George Hopkins' island in the sky today delaying further attempts by skilled mountain climbers to rescue the daredevil parachutist.

Six climbers, one of whom was the last person to scale the 837-foot granite monolith successfully, waited at the foot of the tower whose almost perpendicular sides were made icy-slick by the precipitation.

They said that further attempts to reach Hopkins would be suicidal until the weather had cleared and forecasts for the area gave no promise of that for another day or two. Temperatures continued to drop and had reached freezing today.

Germans Step Up Bombings In Czarist Capital, Shetland Islands; Assert 12,000 More Prisoners Taken; New Peace Offer Hinted.

(By Associated Press) A vast new German offensive, with Moscow perhaps as its principal goal and the siege of Leningrad subordinated, appeared to be emerging today on the long eastern front.

Authoritative sources in London which have been calling the turn of the gigantic struggle, now in its 16th week, said the offensive "on a very considerable scale" had been launched all along the front, with the possible exception of the Leningrad area where German activity seemed to have dwindled.

The offensive may be the "gigantic" operation of which Adolf Hitler hinted in his Sportsplatz speech last Friday. At least that was the line taken by German commentators.

Berlin, however, gave no indication of the goal of the new drive, but Dienst Aus Deutschland, a commentary close to official circles, said the operations were so great as to be "similar to the opening of a new campaign."

There was speculation in London that the major objective was the Russian capital with the attack developing, especially from the area of Rostov about 230 miles southwest of Moscow.

The German high command, holding its counsel in customary fashion, devoted most of its communiqué to the Leningrad action, saying that Russian attempts to land strong forces west of that second largest Russian city had been crushed.

"Offensive operations in the east yielded additional successes yesterday," said the communiqué.

"An attempt to land strong Soviet forces west of Leningrad, supported by the fire of the entire Kronstadt fortress, ships and coastal artillery, was completely crushed yesterday through the determined action of German troops."

The Russian move on the outside of Leningrad siege lines apparently was timed with a thrust from the inside, but the Germans said that, too, was shattered with "heavy and bloody losses for the Russians."

"Troops which were landed were wiped out or taken prisoner," the communiqué went on. "Several fully laden ships were sunk and 22 tanks, including seven of super-heavy types were destroyed."

On Germany's air fronts, the high command announced a Russian port on the Sea of Azov was bombed, along with an important traffic junction west of Moscow and military objectives in Leningrad, a 2,500-ton British vessel was sunk 250 miles west of Brest.

GEN. JOHNSON: All-Out Price Control Bill Proposed

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON
WASHINGTON—There is little doubt that the president's much discussed remark on freedom of religion in Russia was a mistake by Mr. Roosevelt. Even allowing for misquotations and misinterpretation, on the face of the recorded transcript it was a mistake. It was obviously intended, on the eve of congressional debate on "lease-lend" aid to Russia, to deodorize the Communist anti-religion stench in the nostrils of an American people who, from the beginning, have shown themselves willing to sacrifice anything for freedom of every man to worship in accordance with the dictates of his own conscience.

It was a mistake because too many people know that it is a prize principle of Communism that religion is an opiate—dope—that persuades people to bear with governmental tyrannies and to solace themselves with a trust in God, who, in the philosophy of Marx, Lenin and Stalin, simply does not exist.

A whole new generation has been reared in "Holy Russia" in a rigid education in this philosophy. Her religious shrines have been deformed. Regardless of any so-called Russian constitutional declarations—regardless of any "declaration" by Stalin for religious liberty, he couldn't reverse the principles of his own life-time, he couldn't undo in a proclamation his work on the minds of Russian youth—at least he couldn't do it effectively enough to carry conviction.

Yes, I believe that the president

ent error. But, I don't go in from that belief to a conclusion that we shouldn't do what we could to help Russia keep Hitler engaged on an eastern front, thrusting away from our direction and losing strength as rapidly as possible.

I think we should do that as long as we are sure that this aid goes for that purpose alone and that we are not risking a loss of our precious supplies for Hitler later to be used against ourselves.

That may not be idealism, but the most realistic thing on earth is war and you can't pursue it without being realistic to the utmost.

To be brutally frank, it is like our using Indian allies in our Colonial days. We used them and so did our enemies. We used them knowing that they were treacherous allies, would destroy us in the end if they could, and were savage pagans who tortured, murdered and killed prisoners with glee and gusto. We used them because they harassed our enemies and made our task easier.

This situation is almost parallel. Stalin's form of dictatorial government is as hostile to our own as is Hitler's. He also seeks world domination through a Communist revolution. He has done as much or more treacherous sabotage of mind and material in this country as Hitler and will doubtless continue or resume it at the first opportunity. But at this exact moment the two gangsters are at each other's throats and Hitler seems to be winning. It is to our interest to help Russia resist—not for any better reason than sheer materialism.

Let's do it, but do it with our eyes open and not on any hokum about Stalin's religious or democratic regeneration.

13 KILLED IN STATE; 13 HURT IN CITY'S AREA

Four in Ashland Hospital After Accident; Slippery Pavements Blamed.

Death which claimed at least 13 Ohio motorists over the weekend steered clear of highways in the Mansfield area but 13 persons were injured in minor collisions caused by slippery pavements.

Sam H. Binder, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Binder, Cleveland, suffered a possible skull fracture yesterday when his father's auto was struck in the rear by another on U. S. Route 42, nine miles northeast of Ashland.

Binder received a severe cut near his left eye but Mrs. Binder, escaped injury. Carl Swartzmiller, Columbus, driver of the other car, suffered a lacerated nose and Patricia Marie, his 11-month-old daughter, received bruises about the head. All were taken to the Ashland Samaritan hospital.

In Shelby, W. A. Colich, of Willard, escaped injury when his auto skidded on rails at the New York Central railroad crossing at Vernon road and traveled 100 feet up the track before it overturned late Saturday. The car was badly damaged.

Bernard Katile, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Katile, New Washington, suffered cuts and bruises about the head late yesterday in a collision near Attica. He was treated at the Willard municipal hospital.

Four persons were injured, none seriously, when two automobiles collided on State Route 61, five miles south of Mt. Gilead, yesterday afternoon.

State highway patrolmen reported that cars driven by Rollin Simmons, Cardington, R. D. 3, and Jack B. Refining, Elyria, were both badly damaged in a collision which occurred when Simmons turned out of a driveway.

Dr. J. R. Tomlin and Mrs. Tomlin, 359 Ruth avenue, escaped injury when their automobile skidded and overturned in a ditch on State Route 13 yesterday. He told state highway patrolmen that his car skidded on the wet pavement as he was attempting to make a curve.

Four persons were injured last night when their car ploughed into the rear of a trailer-truck loaded with steel on U. S. Route 30-N, about five miles east of Bucyrus. Louis Kinney, Canton, driver of the truck, told police investigating the crash that he had stopped the truck after his lights had gone out. Kinney said he had placed red lanterns at the rear of the truck to warn motorists.

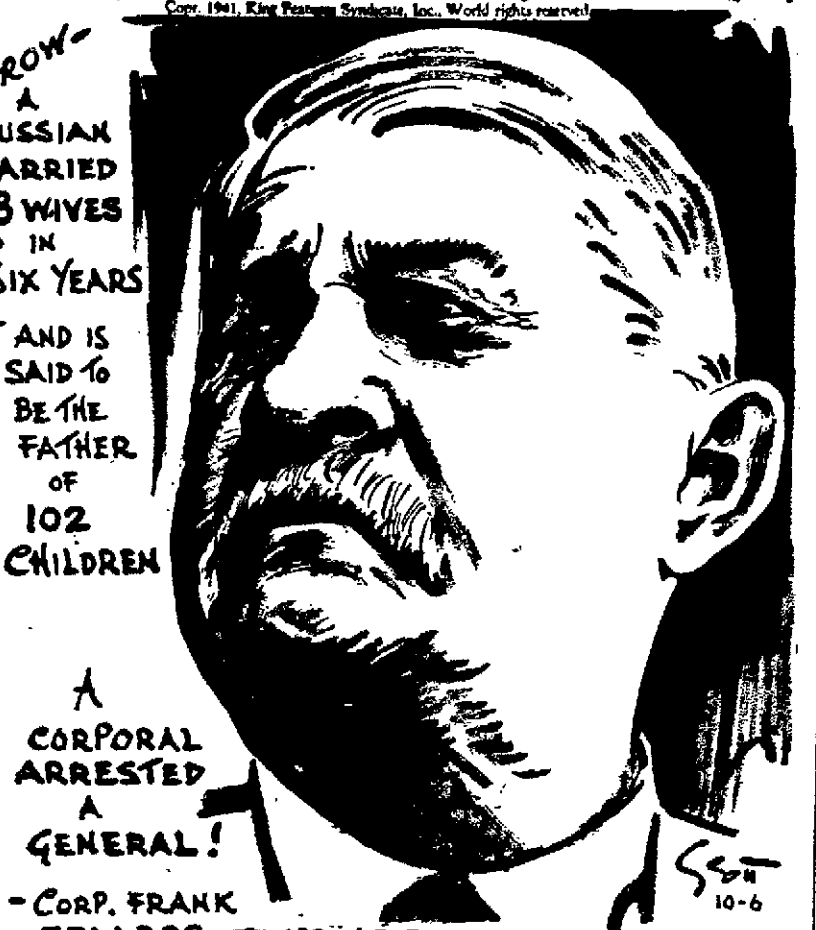

Injured were Arthur Berg, Upper Sandusky, who received chest injuries and cuts and bruises; his wife and daughter, who were also cut and bruised, and another passenger, Mrs. Alfred Uhlich, received face lacerations.

If Richland county corn huskers want to test their speed at shucking "nubbins" this fall, they will have to go outside the county to do it. Although a county husking contest was considered, farm leaders have decided that they will be too busy with the "food-for-defense" program to arrange the details. Other northcentral Ohio counties will have contests this month, however, and county winners will compete at a state husking contest in Champaign county during the week of Oct. 20.

Mansfield jaywalkers would have to be contortionists to be able to read the anti-jaywalk signs erected at several downtown intersections by the Junior Chamber of Commerce in August. The wind and rain have taken their toll of the signs. Most of the red flags attached to the signs to attract attention have been torn away while the signs have been bent parallel to the ground. More enduring have been the painted footprints to point out the proper lanes for crossing intersections.

Legislation at some times can become a vicious thing. The Mansfield board of health at its last meeting passed a new plumbing ordinance which not only changed plumbing regulations but also abolished the jobs of Fred Haag, city plumbing inspector, and the plumbers' examining board. The health board remembered to pass another ordinance immediately rehiring Haag but forgot about the examining board. The examiners will get new life tonight when the board reappoints them.

MEASURE TO FIX CEILING INTRODUCED

Congress Offered Plan Limiting Wages, Profits and Consumer Costs.

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON — Congress will offer an all-out price control measure today which would pose ceilings on virtually everything from rents and wages to defense profits and agricultural products.

The measure was proposed by Rep. Gore (D-Tenn.), promising a young member of the house bargaining and currency committee which is now considering administrative supported legislation designed combat inflation.

The price ceilings, under the Gore proposal, would follow generally the prices in effect during the current week—Oct. 6-12 period being recommended as the "base period."

Under legislation endorsed by Leon Henderson, administrator of the office of price administration, the fixing of ceilings would be left to the administrator's discretion and would not cover either wages or profits from defense contracts.

Gore's bill would: Create the office of emergency inflation control to be administered by one administrator appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate.

Fix a ceiling upon all rents for dwelling places in municipalities of 10,000 or more population; the rent rate in effect this week.

Fix a ceiling upon the sale of a wholesale of all commodities at a wholesale price in effect this week with the provision that no ceiling would be applicable to any agricultural commodity at a price below parity.

Establish a ceiling upon all salaries, wages and commissions of this week. It would be unlawful for any employer, except those employing fewer than eight people, to pay a salary, wage or commission in excess of the ceiling.

Provide that all profit in excess of eight per cent of the cost of performing a national defense contract would automatically revert to the government.

Love dies, and even those dancing at the funeral can't see the corpse. The only memories Broadway cares about are the memories that are being made at the moment. Tomorrow's memories, being made tonight.

You go over to Ben Marden's Riviera, for instance, and there is Harry Richman singing a new torch song, with lyrics something like this: "Ask me do I miss her— I'll answer you through tears. Don't ask me why we parted. . . . I'll be asking that myself for years."

And what are the eyes around the ringside seeing? What are the mouths around the ringside saying?

They are seeing a well-built fellow with plenty of assurance standing out in the spotlight, singing. They are saying: "Richman's in good form, isn't he?" and they are saying: "I like that song."

But you can tell by their faces that none of them is wondering if, perhaps, Harry Richman isn't singing that torch song because he and Hazel Forbes ended it all in the divorce courts just a few months ago.

Broadway, you see, has a hard time remembering that far back.

According to Eddy Duchin—who would doubt his word—a panhandler stopped him on Broadway and asked for a dollar for a cup of coffee.

"Why," was Eddy's inevitable query, "do you need a dollar?"

"Do you want a practical answer," retorted the bum, or one that will make a Broadway column?"

AFL PLEDGES DEFENSE AID

Labor Warned of Sacrifices as Convention Opens on West Coast.

(By Associated Press)
SEATTLE—Full support of national defense by the American Federation of Labor was pledged today as the organization opened its 61st convention.

The executive council, in a report prepared for submission at the opening session, said the AFL would do its part "in complete confidence that the spirit of a free people cannot be crushed, and that victory will bring broader and more stable world conditions assuring freedom in life and work."

The report warned that labor would face inescapable sacrifices in the coming year, and recommended that "local central labor unions everywhere take the leadership in establishing the concept and the practice that the local unions must be maintained as agencies for human freedom and human welfare."

Of relations with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the executive council report said the council "reaffirms its position in favor of peace negotiations designed to bring about a settlement of differences. . . and asserted 'responsibility for failure to meet and renew negotiations. . . rests squarely and definitely with leaders of the rebel, rival, dual CIO movement.'"

RESCUER DROWNS

Boy, 9, Carried Away by Current After Saving Brother, 5.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — A nine-year-old Cleveland boy was drowned a few moments after he had rescued his five-year-old brother from the Mohican river near Brink Haven.

The drowned boy was Robert McNamara, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McNamara. His brother Gerald, playing yesterday atop the steep river bank, fell into the stream. Robert jumped into the water from an overhanging limb and pulled his brother to the bank. While attempting to scramble up the bank, Robert fell back into the river and was carried away by the strong current.

Shortage of Scrap Curtails Steel Production in U. S.

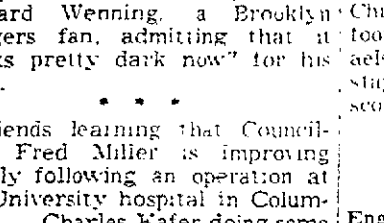

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Shortage of scrap has begun to curtail steel production and may seriously threaten output unless supplies are enlarged, according to the weekly summary of the magazine Steel.

"At least five open hearths were taken off last week by producers in Ohio and Pennsylvania," the trade publication said. "At Chicago, the situation is critical. Detroit steelmakers have so little material on hand that they may be forced to take off some open hearths this week."

They've Reformed, Keep Testimonial Dinner A Secret

CLEVELAND — (AP) — It was one of the strangest testimonial dinners ever.

Neither the name of the man who was honored nor the name of the 900 who attended can be mentioned.

They gathered at the Hotel Statler yesterday to pay tribute to the founder of Alcoholics Anonymous, an organization of reformed alcoholics whose aim is to aid other devotees of the cup that cheers.

It is a secret fraternity. Its founder is a former New York broker who conceived the idea while being treated for alcoholism in a sanitarium. He helped others by applying the theory that every drinker wants to quit.

The movement started seven years ago and now includes 6,000 members throughout the country. Both women and men are members.

The dinner was so anonymous that it was listed on the hotel bulletin board only as "Appreciation Dinner."

A brief pause was held in memory of five deceased members, Ethel Diamond, Bess Sharrock, Bernice Berger, Freda Mathias and Addison Crissinger. Rose and green, the class colors, predominated in appointments. Pennants on which were the 1910 numerals were attached to toothpicks and stuck in gum drops, and were at the places for favors.

"THIS BOOK ISN'T WORTH READING ... tear down the Library!"

One bad book doesn't make it a bad library. You wouldn't destroy the library to get rid of a few bad books.

A similar situation holds in the beer industry. The vast majority of beer retailers operate clean, decent law-abiding establishments. Now and then an occasional "black sheep" retailer turns up who violates the law or permits anti-social conditions.

The Beer Industry is now actively working to eliminate such retailers. We want to protect your right to drink good beer and our right to make it.

We also want to protect the economic benefits of beer. Right here in Ohio, beer provides employment for 50,196 persons, supports an annual payroll of $46,441,543 and contributed $10,717,714 last year in state taxes.

This state, too, has an important stake in Beer's purchases from more than 100 industries supplying the brewing industry with materials, equipment and services.

You, too, can help the cause of moderation by (1) patronizing only the reputable places where beer is sold, and (2) reporting any law violation you may observe to the duly constituted authorities.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1941

It seems to be taking entirely too many isolationists to explain Lindbergh.

A news item says that ASCAP music is coming back—even before some people noticed that it had been away.

Writer on child psychology says: "The baby is entirely self-centered, and concerned solely with its own comfort and satisfaction"—which discloses how some grown folks started to get that way.

One Mother's Safety Plea

WHY keep mentioning traffic accidents, it doesn't seem to do any good", is the occasional comment of a newspaper reader—but it may be wondered what total might be reached by fatalities and injuries from automobile accidents if all safety efforts were abruptly stopped.

Newspapers of the United States, as a part of the public service they constantly try to give, co-operate in national, state and local safety campaigns in an effort to direct public notice to highways dangers and in an endeavor to find ways by which traffic hazards can be reduced.

It was a poignant plea, captioned "Editorial By Telephone," which appeared the other day in the Detroit Free Press:

"Please—you can't say it too often," said the young woman's voice over the telephone. "This traffic safety is so much more than words in a newspaper, posters on utility poles and talk over the radio. It's flesh and blood; to me it's the lives of my two little girls. I take them to school every day—they're just starting—get them at noon, take them back after lunch and go for them in the afternoon.

"Their school is only three blocks away and, of course, we walk. But four times a day I know a little of how a condemned prisoner must feel in walking the 'last mile.' Of course, there is the schoolboy patrol and traffic officers, and they do a splendid job. But there are unprotected corners and what good is traffic control in stopping a maniac who is drunk, or a driver who thinks he can beat the red light?"

"I'm calling you today because coming home at noon with the girls it was a split second that saved the three of us from a driving fool who cut a corner short against a light. Don't ever stop saying it. It isn't words: it's flesh and blood. It's the lives of my little girls and all the small children of the city."

What was said by the young Detroit mother applies equally well in all other cities. Small children, going to or from school, or at play, are on the same streets that are traveled by automobiles which are sometimes driven by persons who do not stop to think that a child may be badly injured or killed by a split-second of carelessness or inattention.

The Detroit mother is right—when the subject is traffic and saving lives, "you can't say it too often."

Finding Substitutes for 'Essentials'

EXTENSIVE research goes on steadily at Wright Field, Dayton, and laboratory experts seek substitutes or synthetic materials to replace those now essential to airplane manufacture, which might be cut off during war time. Detailed description of their work cannot be given, but some facts have been announced which suggest not only progress but amazing possibilities.

For example, certain types of synthetic fabrics have been tested and approved as substitutes for parachute silk and for use in corded tires. Cotton materials have been developed which serve as well as linen webbing in parachute harness. A synthetic fabric is almost ready to take the place of the present wing surface covering.

The layman whose daily life and work are far removed from chemical research begins to believe that the laboratory experts can work any magic they choose. He wonders a little whether any of the raw materials on which industries and civilizations have been built and for which wars have been fought are really vital. The essential "raw materials" and "natural resources" of the future may be far different from those we now know.

Russia's Military Commissars

A RECENT dispatch from the Russian front sheds light on that curious institution, the "political commissar" who accompanies every military unit and whose approval is necessary for any order. Incredible as it is, the plan seems to work well.

The joint commanders are said to be nearly always good friends. If either is killed at the front, the other takes his place. A story is told of a commander who was very indignant because the commissar was out in plain sight of the enemy and wouldn't come down into the trench when asked to do so. "You spoil my whole camouflage!" the commander complained angrily. The other merely laughed. "When you were in my place, I called to you to come down, but you refused," he retorted.

The friendship of the seeming rivals in this double-jointed arrangement, says the correspondent, is natural and harmonious and the highest type of fraternity.

Hay Mows May Be Next To Go

PERHAPS only city folk will object that science is going too far when it proposes to do away with the hay mows and big red barns of the Middle West. The new idea is that such barns are too expensive to maintain as well as being fire hazards and that there are newer and better ways of storing and using hay than the old one of drying it and piling it up to the roof of a two-story barn.

At any rate, experiments are already under way at the agricultural college of the University of Wisconsin to test such ideas. Leading dairymen, engineers, farm editors and research workers are sharing in this effort. The one-story barns they are testing can be built largely with unskilled farm labor. They are made practical by modern, fast-moving methods of making hay with new field cutters, choppers and balers. The handiest place for chopped hay or grass silage, says a farm engineer, is in a low shed or silo alongside the herd barn.

The big barn was picturesque and its hay mow was a grand place to play on those childhood visits to the farm. The hay was fragrant and the far reaches of the barn were exciting. But if science has found better and safer ways to care for and feed the stock, nostalgic memories should not be allowed to stand in their way.

Some folks complain that newspapers do not tell the whole truth—possibly never stopping to think how much hob this would play in obituaries.

Kansas reports failure of the turnip crop—but here's a case where the supply will probably equal the demand.

If we're "in the war up to our necks," as some insist—then it's very necessary to keep "chins up."

A hard winter is predicted—particularly for taxpayers.

THE LIGHT OUR FOREFATHERS GAVE US

Republican Hope 'Springs Eternal'

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Those Republican "leaders" who recently met in Chicago and planned "details" of the 1942 congressional campaign are a living proof of the old saying that "hope springs eternal in the human breast."

Certainly the gentlemen are not concerned about past performances. The notion that history repeats itself, especially in politics, should make them smile at their own antics, but apparently they are very serious indeed. At this time, when the pattern of America slowly drifting into a war is being repeated after twenty-off years, an outsider would think men with political ambitions would be trying to project the present situation to his own advantage.

Some of the isolationists, especially in the senatorial group, are trying to do just that. It would seem to observe that, if one studied the situation of each with regard only to selfish ambition, the lads are not acting shrewdly.

Cast your mind back to that list of the "little group of willful men" denounced by Woodrow Wilson less than a month before this country entered the war. They were the isolationists of their day. Did any of them achieve their burning personal ambitions? One of them, years later in 1924, was nominated for president—but on a third party ticket. That was Robert M. La Follette, father of the present Wisconsin Senator. His ticket, on which Senator Burton K. Wheeler, leader of the present isolationists, was the candidate for vice president, carried precisely one state—La Follette's own Wisconsin.

None of the others enhanced his political stature AFTER that, though one of them, George W. Norris, of Nebraska, is still in the senate, and has lived to see his anti-utility crusade grow and blossom.

BUT let's revert to the Republican leaders now plotting for 1942. It is somewhat reminiscent of the so-called "Grass Roots" Republican conclave held in Illinois during Roosevelt's first administration. It would be easy to recall names. Anyone can remember them, but to name a name requires an explanation of that particular case history, each one of which would require at least a column.

Suffice it to say that no one who was prominent in that gathering got anywhere as a result of it—even in the Republican convention which met in 1936. Soreness over several of these disappointments spotted the bad apples in the barrel which made the Republican national campaign of 1936 one of the most maladroitness in recent political history —certainly since that for Charles E. Hughes in 1916.

Not that Alfred M. Landon had a Chinaman's chance of beating Roosevelt anyhow, even if his campaign had been well managed, but many of the personal jealousies which literally infested G.O.P. national headquarters while Landon was a candidate were the fruit of that grass roots convention.

LET us turn back to a successful campaign of the Republicans, that of 1920. It is true that Will H. Hays built up the most efficient organization the party ever had. That was due to the ability of Mr. Hays, the best national chairman, with the possible exception of Jim Farley, any political reporter now alive has watched.

But—did any of the men who did that job, the men who planned what the party should do back in 1919, get their wishes in 1920? Hays, as everyone knew, hoped for the nomination himself. The platform so carefully worked out in advance was thrown on the scrap heap by the Chicago convention. And Warren Harding was nominated.

Hospitals Care for Soldier's Health

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

RECENTLY I visited an army hospital—the first one I have seen of those erected in the present emergency. Curiously and nostalgia were the motives that animated me. And the scene brought back very vividly the years I spent in one during a previous emergency.

The general plan of the present hospitals is identical with the old ones—a series of wards, all one story high, connected by covered runways. To each ward is assigned an attending physician or surgeon, and on each ward one or more nurses are on duty constantly.

The laboratories for examination of blood, urine, tissue, etc., X-ray equipment, the surgical operating rooms are all well-equipped with the most up-to-date appliances. There was a thoroughly modern set of dental offices as well as adequate ear, nose and throat and eye clinics in the hospital I saw.

Physical Therapy. An especial feature is a building devoted to physical therapy—baths, water treatments of all kinds, light treatment, diathermy, massage rehabilitation exercises, etc. This important field of treatment is most necessary in convalescent treatment of sprains, fractures, dislocations and similar injuries to which soldiers are subject in the strenuous life of maneuvers.

I was much impressed with the character and professional qualifications of the medical officers I met. They have come from responsible positions in private practice, and many have been well trained in specialties. Most of them naturally are young, but all of them have had a year in a civilian hospital as internes, and in most cases an additional year as a resident physician, so they are well-equipped in knowledge of hospital ways.

At the hospital I visited there are regular staff meetings of the doctors to discuss difficult cases, and a weekly meeting at which reports in medical journals of new developments in all branches of medicine and surgery are discussed.

I was surprised to find so few cases of contagious diseases. That was a constant problem with us during the last war. It was largely due, I believe, to the sudden mingling of large groups of men from different parts of the country—these contacts set loose disease germs to which one group has acquired no immunity.

In the present crisis draftees are inducted in smaller groups which cuts down wholesale cross infections. There has been some measles and mumps, but not nearly as much as was our experience.

Neutrality Act Encouraged Hitler To Begin War, Senator Now Agrees

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One of the president's major foreign policy contentions is that the refusal of congress in the summer of 1939 to approve his recommendation that the Neutrality Act be modified was a leading factor in precipitating the European war. Had the law been amended to permit the delivery of arms, he holds, Hitler would have thought twice before pulling the trigger.

This thesis has been hotly controverted by isolationists, who blocked the plan to revise neutrality. The late Senator William E. Borah attacked it, and said only a few weeks before the invasion of Poland that he had highly authoritative assurances there would be no war.

But in Manchester, N. H., Wednesday, a leading Republican senator, who has been a bitter New Deal foe, will publicly back up Roosevelt's contention. Sen. Styles Bridges will declare "that there might not have been a war" had congress followed Roosevelt's counsel.

Senator Bridges will say that Hitler began hostilities because he felt "secure in the belief that the United States would not interfere," and that the factor that gave him this assurance was the Neutrality Act which put the U. S. "in a straitjacket as far as international relations are concerned and prevented important help to besieged, oppressed and attacked nations."

Senator Bridges will also assert flatly that if congress had not finally, on Roosevelt's insistence, repealed the arms embargo, Britain today would be defeated and the United States at war.

Reams of expert applications, which under Maxwell had been peremptorily rubber stamped "license refused," were reconsidered and approved. The decks are not cleared yet, but Perkins and Lord have made a good start at getting them cleaned up very soon.

Note—The state department, whose munitions control bureau under Joseph C. Green is one of the worst bureaucratic bottlenecks in Washington, made a strenuous undercover effort to get control of ECA, but was rebuffed by the White House.

Merry-Go-Round.

A FEW days after the Germans invaded Russia, a state department official bet that the Nazis would not take Moscow before August 15. After he had won that bet, he made another, with October 1 as the date. Now he has won that bet, and is betting that Moscow will not be taken before spring, if at all. . . . Several high-up public servants are wearing little gold boxing gloves presented them by public-spirited Dr. John A. Ross of Detroit. He has given them to Henry Wallace, Wendell Willkie, Bob Jackson, J. Edgar Hoover and several others as a token of their championing the cause of the public.

Raskob's 100,000 Acres.

THE BIGGEST current land purchase in the United States is now being negotiated by John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee when Al Smith tried to defeat Hoover. Ironically, his associate in the deal is Tom Campbell, one of Hoover's close friends.

It is a deal involving 100,000 acres of New Mexican land, forcing hundreds of small farmers to join the vast army of migrant workers.

Raskob, who helped build up General Motors and is a leading figure in the duPont organization, owns a big farm on the eastern shore of Maryland. But recently, he has been credited with an ambition to run for the senate from New Mexico, a state which Sen. Bronson Cutting, wealthy New Yorker, to the senate, and where ex-Secretary of War Pat Hurley also is making political medicine.

Tom Campbell, who is helping Raskob, is probably the world's biggest wheat farmer, operating 95,000 acres in Montana. He also was hired by the Soviet government to organize its mass-production wheat farming on ten million acres.

Raskob and Campbell now plan the same type of mass-production agriculture in New Mexico. They already own 216,000 acres and are getting 100,000 acres more in a manner which has brought harsh criticism from the U. S. agriculture department.

A Farmer's Diary

Elusive Crane

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

EVERY evening during the summer, at sunset or shortly after, two cranes flew northward across our little valley. Each went alone—one crossed west of the barn, the other went some distance east of the house.

On the wing, with the long neck pointing forward and the still-like legs swung backward on the same horizontal plane, they have a certain majesty about them. The leaden-colored wings and back glow and glisten in colors not their own, as the last rays of the sun touch them from behind the hill. Or if the flight is later, and the sky reflects the amber afterglow, this milder, more delicate coloring seems to clothe the gliding figure and to enlarge its rhythmic proportions picturesquely.

Just where these two unusual birds rest for the night is a secret of their own. I have concealed myself at dusk beneath a canopy of wild grape that climbs a sapling and makes a shelter like a tent. From this hideout, I watched a crane descend on broad outspread wings, and come to rest within a tree-top. But when I cautiously found my way along the brushy bank, and sought the tree, the bird was gone.

I have never seen them fly back in the morning. They likely take this course before the dawn. The level rushy pasture on Honey Creek gives them ample cover and the numerous water snakes, frogs, lizards and hoppers of the marshes furnish abundant food. Many times, along the creek bank, I have been near enough to hear the crane's wing flap heavily and see him rise above the white thorn bushes. Only once did I see him stand at rest.

I was lying beneath a fallen elm trunk watching a big snapper and his mate, when a huge shadow crossed the little pool before me. In a little while it moved across again, and then I heard the swish of great broad wings and saw the crane alight at the edge of the shallow pond. He stood motionless as a statue. A frog jumped into the water and, like a lance, his long head shot forward and down. His pointed beak must have pierced his victim for I saw no movement of either part. Then he brought it to the surface and bit the writhing frog against a stump, tossed it a little way into the air, and caught it in his narrow open beak. One gulp and the helpless, injured frog was down. A second later he stood again like a statue, the same innocent, unassuming fisherman as before. Only the slightest movement on my part, and he sensed danger. With a harsh, hoarse croak of annoyance he flew away.

Observe Business Women's Week

MEMBERS of the Mansfield Business and Professional Women's club are observing National Business Women's week with special meetings and programs during the coming days. Mayor William J. Locke issued a proclamation for the observance of the week, which began Sunday. Local B. and P. W. members met for a devotional service at the First Methodist church yesterday morning. On Wednesday evening a public affairs dinner meeting and guest party will take place at the ballroom of the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Mansfield members have also been invited to attend the meetings of B. and P. W. clubs in neighboring cities during this week.

National Business Women's week was first observed in 1928. Its purpose was to dramatize the contribution of women to the business and professional life of the country. At that time the Federation had 874 clubs and 50,000 members. In 1941 the Federation has 1,700 clubs, 75,000 members and is organized in every state in the nation, the District of Columbia, Alaska, and Hawaii.

In 1928, when the week was launched, there was no slogan used, but by 1929, and that year the hey-day of the post-war prosperity era, the slogan was "Be a Saver" and the emphasis was on thrift.

In 1933, with the depression deepening its hold on the country, the Federation turned its thoughts to helping unemployed women and the slogan adopted was "We Give." In 1934 the week was built around a definite re-employment program and the emphasis laid on the securing of jobs for 5,000 unemployed women.

By 1936, with bombs bursting in the air in Asia and Europe, and Democracy the subject of adverse propaganda by the communistic and fascist nations of the world, the slogan was "Effective Democracy."

An earlier slogan, was dusted off and streamlined for the 1938 celebration, "Better Business Women for a Better Business World." In 1939 the topic was "One Hundred Years of Women's Progress." In 1940 the theme was "Business Women in a Democracy—Vote."

And now, in 1941, Business Women's week will be observed from Oct. 5 through Oct. 11. The topic is "Strengthen Democracy for Defense." The poster for the week highlights the idea of three women in different age groups, young, middle-aged and older, looking up at the Statue of Liberty. The poster fits in with the program theme for the year, "Strengthen Democracy for Defense."

"Pitfalls of Love"
(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

"Even so eminent a creator of fiction detectives as Conan Doyle balked at that problem," my father said. "Do you remember how Sherlock Holmes found out where a woman had hidden something—by having an alarm of fire sound in her apartment; then she promptly flew to rescue the hidden photograph?"

"And Irene Adler had nothing on Lil," Harry Underwood said. "But I'm banking on Madge. If Lil hasn't destroyed that letter—" He left the sentence in midair, and I finished it.

"I would wager a good deal that she hadn't destroyed it," I said, but I refrained from telling them the real reason for my belief. There was no use, I thought, in wounding Harry Underwood's already overwrought nerves with the thought that Lillian would not destroy what might be the last handwriting of her idolized daughter which she would see.

Underwood Agrees.

But my precaution was futile. I realized, when Henry turned eyes filled with suffering upon me.

"I'm backing that wager," he said, and I needed no other proof that he was sharing my thought. I hastened to strike a note of divergence from that topic.

"When may I start?" I asked, looking at my father. He had not yet openly agreed to my plan, but I was fairly sure of his assent.

"The sooner, the better," he said promptly. "Harry will take you upstairs and leave you with Miss Whitlock. Then if you will come back here, Harry, I have much to discuss with you."

"I am at your service," the big man said, while I struggled with—and routed—a wholly unworthy feeling of envy, that I should be barred from knowledge of the mystery surrounding Marion which I intuitively felt my father had acquired.

Searched Thoroughly.

"Just a minute, Harry," I said, as he swung open the door and stepped aside for me to pass through. "There are one or two questions I want to ask you, that may save me a good deal of time and trouble."

"Go ahead! Shoot!" he said.

"Tell me again just what you searched," I said.

"Every trunk, bag, drawer and cubbyhole of desk, including that secret panel of which Lil's so proud; all the bureau drawers, the pockets of all her dresses, every shelf in the closet, and every parcel in it. We turned the bathroom upside down, too. We didn't leave a single cranny unsearched."

"What about the books? Did you open those?"

"Yes, every last one of them, and looked behind each row. You can pass up the bookcases."

"Did you take up the rugs?"

"Yes, and we looked behind every picture, too."

"At any rate," I said, trying to make my voice encouraging. I know now where I don't need to look."

"I suppose that's something," Mr. Underwood replied.

"I'll do my best," I told him simply. "May we start now?"

He delayed only long enough to take my hand from his shoulder and kiss it gravely, tenderly. "You blessed girl," he said. "I am counting on that 'best'."

"I'll not knock," he said, "nor will I speak aloud. And I'll go directly down again. Lil might hear me."

I tapped ever so gently upon the door. Miss Whitlock opened it, and I whispered my greeting. "Please come out into the hall for a second," I said. "I want to talk to you."

DISTRIBUTION DECIDES

It is a very bad mistake for a player to over-stress honor strength when deciding a question of whether or not he should respond to his partner's opening bid. With an exactly balanced distribution, containing at least three cards in every suit and only four in the longest, there is no extra value from suit-length and suit-shortage, and consequently a pretty fair amount in honors should be held, at least about the equivalent of an ace or king and queen. But if you have a good trump fit and a short suit, where your trumps can be used, you may raise without fear.

Declarer
 ♠ A K Q 9 3
 ♥ J 6 2
 ♦ K J 10 9

The cards shown above illustrate emphatically the difference between having good distribution and bad distribution. With the No. 1 hand as dummy, a declarer at 4-Spades can make his contract very easily, losing only one trick in hearts, one in diamonds and one in clubs.

With hand No. 2 as dummy, the declarer, unless he is very lucky through receiving an inefficient defense, should ordinarily lose three tricks in hearts, one in diamonds and one in clubs, therefore being down two tricks.

The sole difference between these two hands is the fact that No. 2 contains no distributional values, whereas No. 1 does. The singleton heart makes the hand two tricks stronger in the play, as two of South's hearts can be ruffed by it.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, Oct. 7.

Generally the astral influences for this day might be read as wielding an adverse influence, but for the fact that such challenging conditions are to be met with a mentality sound in judgment able to encounter duties, obligations and difficulties with balance and stability. The need to concentrate forces and to work toward breaking down obstacles may be ready for opposition, craft and intrigue.

Those whose birthday it is may be able to cope with certain adverse or treacherous situations, during the year, by adhering to set and well-organized plans and objectives, using shrewd as well as clever tactics to meet intrigue, subtlety, tricks and betrayals in all relations and delaying private as well as business and public or group action. The mind should be found equipped to meet all difficulties with shrewdness.

A child born on this day while susceptible to imposition, fraud and duplicity, should be shrewd and clever enough to meet them.

CHAPTER XIX

"Sort of a show-down meeting," Thad answered. "Them as wants oil versus them as don't. If you get what I mean."

"It's awful," Lillian said, but her first spirited tone had suddenly remembered. "Mother is in tears."

"Hmmm! And a derrick right here!" Dallas looked appraisingly at it. "Virtually finished, too. They'll be ready to spud in soon, Thad?"

"Looks like it."

"I see. Then the point is, these people don't want an oil well on this lawn. On this street, say, Thad?"

Thad nodded.

"And so they have come out to protest, eh?"

"Yes," Lillian said. "But mother had to—had—well, business is business, Dr. Tower, and—"

"Surely," said he, kindly, holding her eyes. Then he suddenly beamed with his old irresistible grip, trying deliberately to break Lillian's reserved manner again.

"But, listen, Miss, a moment ago you—say, would you take me to your mother? She's a charming somebody and I haven't seen her in quite a time. Please do!"

Lillian glanced once at Thad, then said, "of course. Come on."

Dal took her elbow, guiding her through the crowd. Beyond the whites, nearer the front steps of the home, were 50 or so colored people who were deeply interested in the phenomena here. They opened politely to let Dal and Lillian pass. In the shadowed front porch the two were suddenly in comparative privacy.

"Wait," said Dal. "It was you I wanted to see, Lillian. When I first came up you called me Dal, and smiled like you meant it. Then all at once you changed to a cold-shoulder attitude again. Now I don't know what the custom down here in Texas is, but when we don't understand a thing up in Illinois we just naturally inquire. You liked me at first. I know you did. And about that dance hall business—I tried my level best—"

"Please don't, Dal! You don't understand!"

"That's what I'm saying, little girl!" He was stage whispering eagerly above the lawn noise. The depth of his feeling was all too evident. He had taken her hand and he was squeezing it almost to pain, but she didn't feel that. Suddenly her lip trembled. She looked off at the crowd.

The door opened behind her and three or four of Baby Doll's crowd, including Baby Doll herself, burst out.

"Come on, kids!" They suddenly engulfed Dal and Lillian. "Somebody's about to start making a speech!"

There was no escaping, no chance for further privacy. Gangly teen-age boys had begun to climb onto the porch, the better to see. Mrs. Hamilton was approaching the house with distressed expression.

Dal quietly escorted Lillian back onto the grass then toward an empty truck which old Judge Brookfield had appropriated as a speaker's platform. They pushed through the throng. Dal leaned to whisper in her ear again.

"Don't feel badly. Please don't. If your mother has leased her land, it's all right. Business has to go on, Lillian, traditions or no. Maybe, if they do find oil here, the money will be sufficient to make up for any other loss."

In a moment they were standing with Baby Doll, Thad Monroe, Dr. Watkins and several other intimates, right near the truck end. All at once Dal saw Martin Deale near them, back turned. On impulse he reached out a hand and laid it on Martin's shoulder.

"Hello," Dal said, smiling cordially when Martin turned.

But Martin's eyes were almost fiery. "Oh, it's you!" said he.

He glanced at all of them, started to say something to Lillian but instead turned his back again. If Dal felt the cut he showed it only in tightened lips. He turned his gaze up to Judge Brookfield who even now was speaking. And—in a surprising, flowery speech of introduction, the judge introduced Martin Deale; himself!

Martin, it appeared, had been not only the secretary of the new Guardianship Society, but "the one young man in all this county most fitted by rearing and by staunchness of character to state the case of decency and honor." Precisely how honor was involved, the judge didn't say. Anyway the delegates with him applauded. And Martin, flushed now, was almost lifted bodily upon the impromptu rostrum. He stared around at the crowd, inhaled deeply, and began to speak.

Dal Tower felt a hand gripping his arm excitedly. He turned to see Lillian still there and her sister, Baby Doll was wide-eyed. Glancing around, he saw the intense interest everybody showed. Obviously these townspeople were in high emotional strain.

"... and so my fellow citizens the time has come—indeed it is almost too late now!—for us to put a restraint on the unseemly social revolution which has disrupted the peace and harmony of this region!" Martin was going strong, and people were intent on what he said; some of the people, at least. There were still two camps, Dal noted. Even workmen on the derrick had stopped to listen. "As for our beloved Mrs. Mayfield of course she is but a victim of circumstances, a woman who influenced by oily and oil-talking strangers was induced to sign a legal paper. Of course she could not have understood what she was doing. We hold no personal brief against her.

"But the same danger lurks everywhere. This town will become a veritable hellhole! Already thieves and burglars and shysters and criminals of every sort have come in. Men and women of questionable character have set up residence here. It must be stopped! Stopped, I tell you!"

Martin was roaring in unconscious imitation of Judge Brookfield himself. Moreover, he was making a good show of it because of the sincerity he felt, even though he lacked much in discretion.

"Isn't it so, ladies and gentlemen," Martin resumed, "that this whole business is the result of avarice? Of contemptible money-grabbing and utter disregard for the established decencies of living? Isn't that true?" He ended almost with a shout, begging his question.

An abject hush gripped the crowd. And in this hush Dal Tower spoke up, quite involuntarily.

"No!" said Dal, firmly. "What you're saying is ridiculous!"

Instantly the several hundred heads turned to look at Dal.

"You tell 'em, Doc!"

Some voice from deep in the crowd shouted that and Dallas Tower found himself quite unexpectedly the center of attention. On his arrival he had no intention of butting in or heckling or indeed of doing anything here but listen and be near Lillian Mayfield. His outspoken challenge to Martin Deale had been wholly on impulse. He himself couldn't have explained it.

"You're actually blushing, Dal!" Lillian murmured, warning to him again in spite of herself. "And I used to think you a sophisticated person without feeling!"

"Judas!" grumbled he, "I didn't mean—"

"GIT UP 'THAR, DOC! Tell the other side of it!"

"Come on, Doc! Come on!" The cry for him spread. They had heard sanctimonious old Judge Brookfield and then fiery Martin Deale; now that new young doctor in town had unexpectedly loomed as champion for the other side. The two camps in this mass meeting were more and more evident.

Hand clapping started and men began to press nearer to Dallas, urging him to state his arguments publicly.

It Could Only Happen In Brooklyn, Dodger Fans Agree

Sport Podge
by
REX HESS

Now if I were working in Sandusky instead of in Mansfield, I might have written something similar to the story of the Sandusky-Mansfield football game that appeared in the Sandusky Register Saturday.

The Sandusky writer wrote somewhat like this:

—The Streaks had the powerful Mansfield team jittery in the first half when the Tigers could score only six points. And they held Mansfield to only six points in the third period. It wasn't until the last quarter that the Tigers rolled over the tired Sandusky team for 19 points and sent the score to 32 to 0.

And here is the payoff. The Sandusky paper admitted that:—Mansfield piled up more yardage and made more first downs than Sandusky.

Yes, the yardage was 380 to 2, and the first downs 15 to 0.

Yes, I might have written something similar if I had been working in Sandusky. Give the home team credit, I always say.

In conclusion the Sandusky paper declared this coming week-end battle between Sandusky and Elyria should prove the most exciting game of the season, because:

"Both teams have lost their first three games."

That was putting it in 25 words or less. There should be a prize upcoming on that one.

The Sandusky story was in marked contrast to that in the Elyria Chronicle the week before after Mansfield's 39 to 0 victory over Elyria.

The Chronicle called the Tigers one of the most powerful high school teams in the state, and then praised the sportsmanship of Coach Snyder and his boys for not running up the score even more. That was the game in which the second Mansfield team played almost all the last half.

Ah, well. As the golfers say: For when the One Great Scorer comes To check upon you blokes, It isn't how you played the game. But, did you count your strokes?

League Kegler Almost Gets 300

The N.C.O. traveling league almost saw a 300 game at Colony alleys yesterday, but R. Clark of Fremont after smacking the maples for nine straight strikes, left the 10 pin standing in the 10th frame. He then spared out and wound up with 289.

Fremont took a 2-1 victory over Lieberman, with Clark showing the way on a 655 total. Yes, his 289 was high game.

In the other league tilt at Colony alleys, Marion Mid-Town Chevrolts defeated the Eagles 2-1. Winner of Marion rolled high game of 625 on 206-196-220.

ROYAL CROWN COPS FIRST SPECIAL MATCH

Royal Crown women bowlers chalked up their first special match victory of the season yesterday, defeating Galion women by 232 pins at Colony alleys. Thelma Linster led the Royal Crowns with a 463 total that included a 202 game.

Giants Hit Hard, Prep For Bears

New York Leads Eastern Division, Bears Western.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Steve Owen's rejuvenated New York Giants are playing as if they want the thankless task of bucking the devastating Chicago Bears in the playoff for the National professional football championship.

Of course, neither team has yet qualified for the playoff, but off their early season performances they'll fight it out for the title now held by the Bears. The Giants lead the eastern division and the Bears top the western section.

Their perfect records were challenged yesterday and both responded in decisive fashion. The Pittsburgh Steelers, making their debut under Aldo (Buff) Donelli, formerly of Duquesne, held the Giants to a 10-10 draw for two and a half quarters, but then the Giants took charge for an ultimate 37 to 10 triumph.

The Bears pounded out a 48 to 21 victory over Cleveland after the Rams had tied the score early in the second period at 7-7. On the kickoff after the Rams score George McAfee ran 97 yards for a touchdown and shortly afterward Young Bussey passed to Ken Kavanaugh for 45 yards and another six-point lead. By intermission the Bears had registered 28 points in the second quarter and had a comfortable 35 to 7 edge.

Washington, defending eastern champions, bounced back from last week's loss to the Giants by eking out a 3 to 0 victory over the previously undefeated Brooklyn Dodgers. Green Bay rallied in the last quarter to score a touchdown for a 14-3 triumph over the Chicago Cardinals.

WESTERN DIVISION.
Chi. Bears 3 0 0 73 38
Green Bay 3 0 0 78 35

The telephone company and the taverns cashed in on yesterday's postponement. "The phone Co., announcing the postponement along with the weather report, received nearly 50,000 calls between noon o'clock and one. . . Brooklyn was all dressed up for the occasion that didn't come off. . . Stores and offices from Borough hall to Bushwick were draped with bunting and banners reading "Welcome Home Dodgers" and "Our Champs." . . . No one mentioned bums.

TAKE-A-CHANCE DEBT.
Turning without warning or special information from the series to football, this is how some of today's games look from here. Tennessee to beat Duke. Fordham over Southern Methodist. Notre Dame to do a neat job on Indiana.

FOG OVER FLATBUSH.
A few fans managed to get into Ebbets Field yesterday even though the gates weren't opened. One woman berated some reporters for arriving late. "You call yourselves fans and you don't get here until 11 o'clock," she shouted. . . Four gatekeepers started a card game while they waited for orders to open up or go home. . . When Judge Landis' decision was announced, the Yanks left their dressing room as though they were anxious to shake the dust of Brooklyn off their feet.

THREE POSTPONED GAMES SCHEDULED

Walker Wins Little Series

Socks Homer as Birds Win Series, Head East.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Columbus possessed its third Little World Series championship in nine years today—and you'll find the kid who clinched it perched somewhere in the stands at Brooklyn rooting for his big brother to come through for the Dodgers in the senior classic.

He's Harry (Little Dixie) Walker, center fielder for the Red Birds and younger brother of "Big Dixie" Walker, right gardener for the Dodgers.

"Little Dixie" crashed a home run, with two mates on base, to climax a last-of-the-ninth five-run rally for the Red Birds yesterday and beat the International League Montreal Royals 9 to 8. The victory gave the American association pennant and playoff winner a four to two advantage in the wee series.

His big blow came just when it appeared the series might go the full seven games, the Royals going into the last half of the ninth with a four-run edge.

"I couldn't wait over another day," Walker said after the game. "I wanted to see Dixie play against those Yanks, so I just picked a good one and banged it out of the park."

"Little Dixie" pulled out immediately after the game, heading east for the Yankee-Dodger classic.

The final game drew 6028 fans, boosting the six-game attendance to 57,524 and the receipts to $39,270.82, of which the players sliced up $19,645.01.

17 Of Ohio's Teams Win All

Schedule This Week Calls For Some Losses.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Seventeen of Ohio's 36 football playing colleges are unbeaten for the infant season, but next week-end's schedule calls for several of them to bite the dust.

Of 23 games scheduled, a dozen against foreign foes, four will pit unbeaten squads against each other.

Dayton's rampaging Flyers, winners of three in a row and with 144 points as they invade Knoxville for a tilt with Tennessee's vaunted Volunteers. Xavier, which beat St. Vincent 21 to 7 at LaTrobe, Pa., Sunday for its third in a row, meets John Carroll next Sunday, and the Clevelanders have only a 0-0 tie with Baldwin Wallace marring their record.

Kent State, Denison, Ohio Wesleyan, Ohio State, Heidelberg and Akron have won two each, while Case, Wittenberg, Kenyon and Wilberforce have won their lone start, but all the others have been beaten or tied with the campaign just getting under way.

Ohio State, after its rousing 33-0 win over Southern California, rests next Saturday to get ready for the Big Ten opening with Purdue the following week. Here's the slate for the others:

Friday—(all night games) Kent State at Case, Findlay at Muskingum, Western Reserve at Akron, Ohio Northern at Albion, Illinois Wesleyan at Youngstown, Lawrence Tech at Wittenberg, Defiance at Ashland.

Saturday: Capital at Heidelberg, Marietta at Mount Union, Wooster at Denison, Otterbein at Oberlin, Bowling Green at Miami, Kenyon at Rochester, Ohio Wesleyan at Baldwin Wallace, Toledo at Marshall, Western Kentucky Teachers at Ohio U., Dayton at Tennessee, Wayne at Cincinnati, De Sales at Grand Rapids, Bluefield at Rio Grande, Westminster at Hiram, and Wilberforce vs. Tuskegee at Chicago.

Sunday: Xavier at John Carroll.

This Sort Of Thing Happens In Brooklyn

The sky scowled and rain fell by the bucket, but the enthusiasm and loyalty of the followers of the Brooklyn "Bums," otherwise known as the Dodgers, were not dampened in the slightest. Brooklyn rooters are pictured, above, as they stood in line outside Ebbets field, Brooklyn, hoping against hope that the rain would cease to permit continuation of the world series.

'Nothing Like This Since The Dam Broke'—Bricker

COLUMBUS—(AP)—An accurate summation of this community's current state of mind can be found in the words of Gov. John W. Bricker:

"Nothing like this has happened to Columbus since the dam busted."

So did his excellency message Coach Paul Brown promptly after Ohio State completed its bewildering 33 to 0 conquest of the vaunted University of Southern California Trojans Saturday.

It supplies, too, a clue as to why the welcoming celebration for the returning Bucks probably will set a new high in welcoming celebrations around here.

The Bucks get back from the coast about 6 p. m. Wednesday, and the police department already is concerned; there are going to be a lot of people on deck.

No one knows at this hour how many, but the experts who can test a public pulse with no little accuracy tell you that the following high water marks will be washed out:—Whiner Chick Harley and his Bucks returned from conquering Michigan for the first time in Ohio State football history (1919); the greeting given Hank Gowdy returning as a World Series hero (1914), and the welcome hung out for the Red Birds after they won the Junior World Series from Buffalo (1933).

There shall be, first of all, a great rally in and around Union Station. And then the customary parade through streets dripping with banners and past store fronts filled with placards saying nice things. A huge rally and bonfire on the campus will top it all off.

This being (even in less hysterical moments) a very rabid football town, Columbus ought to have a pretty tremendous Wednesday night.

The Buckeyes rolled out of Los Angeles last night, and the folks on the coast still were not sure just what all happened during those 60 minutes of football.

Coach Sam Barry of the Trojans remarked: "Our tackling was woefully bad, so was the blocking. No wonder our backs couldn't get anywhere. Ohio State was great, smooth as silk, but I don't think we're that bad."

GOEBEL BEERS WIN FROM GALION TEAM

Goebel Beers took all three games and a 335-pin victory for the Galion Junior Chamber of Commerce, swamped the Lorain Ex-Highs, 58-7, yesterday in a sea of mud, at Heise park here.

Led by Bullet Clabaugh, King college captain last year, Galion scored at will on straight football, rolling up 20 points in the first and last periods. Clabaugh's five touchdowns were scored on runs of 10, 16, 21 and 22 yards and a five yard plunge. Another highlight of the game in the last quarter came when Gene Goldsmith, 230-pound right end, caught the ball from George Corrado's pass, and ran 45 yards for a touchdown.

Mike Campana returned a kick-off 68 yards for Lorain to put them in scoring territory to start second quarter but pass interception halted the drive. Last Thomas, for 40 yards scored Lorain's only touchdown.

GRIDDERS BURNED BY LIME ON AKRON FIELD

AKRON—(AP)—Six football players were treated in hospitals today for burns which their coaches said were caused by lime used to mark the Akron Rubber bowl for a game Friday night between the University of Akron and Bowling Green State University.

Those receiving treatment were Capt. Ed Wellner of River Rouge, Mich., Dewey Johnson of Edgerton, Charles Buckenmeyer of Swanton, and Ross Isell of Toledo. Stan Yodner of Bowling Green and Danny Maravon of Toledo, burned less severely, were treated at their homes. Eight University of Akron men were burned, but only two remained in a hospital. They were Co-Captain Andy Maulke, and Mike Christner, the other six were released after receiving treatment.

Dayton May Outlaw Night Football

DAYTON—(AP)—The athletic committee of the Dayton board of education met today with School Superintendent E. H. Landis to determine whether night scholastic football games will be cancelled permanently as a result of a student riot Saturday night.

Between 500 and 600 high school students marched in the streets after games Saturday night and when police ordered them to disperse, they advanced on police headquarters.

Police took 15 students into custody but released them an hour later.

Landis ordered cancellation of all night football immediately. "Such rowdism can't be tolerated," Landis said. "Something must be done to alter the situation and this is the measure we are taking."

The Kiser-Wilbur Wright game scheduled for tonight has been postponed pending the outcome of the board meeting.

'Bums' Lose Ball Game After It Was In Bag

Owen Fails to Catch Third Strike That Would Have Defeated Yankees

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—(AP)—Yesterday these two things happened in Brooklyn:

A baseball writer, before hurrying away to witness the fourth world series game between his own Dodgers and the hated Yankees had to rush his wife to the hospital. There six stitches were taken in her arm—she had been spiked while playing football with the neighborhood children.

At approximately 4:40 p. m. with the Dodgers leading the Yankees by a score of 4-3 before 33,800 supremely happy Ebbets field fans, with two Yankees out in the ninth inning and with two strikes on Tommy Henrich, feared Yankee slugger, Pitcher Hugh Casey of the Dodgers curved a curve that Henrich missed by close to a foot.

MART BOLSTERED BY DEMAND FOR RAILWAY SHARES

Wall Street Watches Cut In Steel Output as Result of Scrap Shortage.

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK—Demand for rail shares had a bolstering effect on the stock market in today's early dealings although industrial and other departments were somewhat irregular.
Receiving attention in Wall Street boardrooms was the "steel" that the expected curtailment of steel production as a result of the scrap shortage has begun to appear.
September steel bookings were reported heavy but smaller than for several months "and for the first time in many months some mills found shipments in September were equal in bookings."
